Hilario Domínguez, former deputy political director for the Chicago Teachers Union

“A CPS Grad. A CPS Teacher. Married to a CPS Assistant Principal. And the Father of Future CPS Kid. Hilario understands our schools from every angle.”

Hilario Domínguez grew up in Pilsen, the son of a housekeeper and a truck driver, and grew up in Chicago Public Schools.

At Whitney Young he helped organize student walkouts against budget cuts and school closures. He then went to Johns Hopkins where he found his calling in education before retrning to Chicgo where he taught special education in CPS for six years.

He is raising his family in Chicago and running for President of the Chicago Board of Education on the Public School Champions platform:

- Universal full-day pre-K at age three;
- Fresh food and better meals;
- Fully funded Sustainable Community Schools;
- Youth jobs and career pathways;
- Human-centered education.
